Missouri Southern Television should be fully operative by September, according to Richard W. Allen, head of the department of communications.

Allen described the purposes of the MSTV and outlined the format of the program at the Board of Regents meeting last week.

Allen introduced Robert Allen, manager of Cablecom of Joplin, and Tom Lacey, vice president of Cablecom, Southern division, Cities Communications Company in Denver, Cablecom's parent company.

Allen said the "College owes a great deal of appreciation to Mr. Lacey and Mr. Allen."

Allen is glad to make Cablecom Channel 18 available to Missouri Southern.

Southern," said Allen. "My staff will work closely with the College to make it a success."

According to Lacey, "The operation is unique at least to our operation."

Purposes of the project, Massa said, are to serve the general public while at the same time providing meaningful educational experiences for students in communications and in other areas.

"We have had intense, immense enthusiasm for programming from other departments," Massa said.

MSTV will begin operations on one cable system, Cablecom of Joplin, and educational network programming will begin in the near future on Cablecom Channel 18. In time, expansion will occur to other cable systems in southwest Missouri.

Massa said the "target date" for local programming is Sept. 1.

Full schedule programming will come from a national satellite network, national and international distributors, Southern's broadcast communications students, and film departments at the College, according to Massa. Area high school students will also be given the opportunity to produce their own programs.

An outline of local programming, given by Massa to the Board of Regents is as follows:

"Southern Perspectives" will deal with "every phase of life at MSSC," and will be produced by broadcast-communication students.

"Your Public Schools in Action" will allow area high schools to produce their own programs.

"Area Economic Review," an examination of area business and industry, will be produced by students and faculty in Southern's School of Business.

In "Chartlines" students will get in-depth coverage of city councils, school boards, and civic committees. The news-magazine or similar format is "to be tied in with the publication of The Chart, the college newspaper."

In "Commflow" viewers will examine daily problems best solved by a knowledge of communication techniques. This series will be produced by the communications department.

A national educational cable network, "The Learning Channel," will air on MSTV from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily, with repeats of early morning programming from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. when MSTV is in full operation.

"The Learning Channel" will offer adult learning courses; programs in managerial skills, marketing and advertising techniques, and computer basics; a personal enrichment segment; a segment for parents and teachers providing tools to help children learn; a program exploring public education today; a weekend business report; and a wide variety of specials.

Massa also discussed plans that would include offering "telecourses" for academic credit for Southern.

"MSTV will be an exciting, innovative approach to educational communications cable television programming," said Dr. Julio Leon, President of Missouri Southern. "It will offer educational programming of a diverse nature as well as access to news and informational services of local concern."

54th troops march to battle during the mock Civil War skirmish Saturday

Civil War re-enactors stage skirmish

blazing cannons and sharp shots of musket fire, Confederate and Federal Civil War re-enactors engaged in a mock skirmish Saturday at Missouri Southern. This and other events marked the 5th Annual History Day held Friday and Saturday.

The Civil War buffs represented the Federal and Confederate sides in the skirmish, which took place near a pond along the banks of the creek.

Cook, a history instructor at Joplin Junior High School in Joplin, is the Confederate calvary.

The organization is called "Living History's Jasper County Company." "We perform for the public doing history. We dress and show things they used during that time so the public will understand it more readily."

The re-enactors dressed in authentic Civil War uniforms and carried replicas of actual Civil War firearms. Some articles used were actual Civil War relics.

Donald Seneker, director of the police academy, was also involved in the re-enactment. He fought for the Confederates in the battle.

"Most of our carry uniforms of both sides (Federal and Confederate) fill out the ranks," said Seneker.

Over 100 spectators turned out to watch the battle, which the Confederates won. According to Cook, the winner of battles is decided upon before the action starts.

"We try to work it out ahead of time as everybody involved knows," Cook said. "We want to make it as authentic as possible for the public."

According to Seneker, there are many other re-enactment organizations for both Confederates and Federalists in Missouri and across the nation.

"Most of the Federalists here in the Homes Brigade (the Federal army participating in Saturday's battle) are from southwest Missouri, and there are a few from Tulsa," he said.

Seneker said the organization "exists to teach history. We are non-profit education. We all try to portray the

Department outlines objectives, strategies

Objectives, curricula design, an admission and retention process, and a program evaluation for the teacher education program were outlined by Dr. James V. Sandrin, head of the education department, at the Board of Regents meeting last week.

In the absence of Dr. Ed Merryman, dean of the school of education and psychology, Sandrin explained the objectives for the program.

According to the handout presented at the meeting, the program's objectives are divided into two sets.

The first set deals with "the final product" of the program, which is the "professional teacher."

Objectives in the second set regard "the means in which the final product is achieved."

Nine objectives were outlined concerning the development of a perspective teacher. Each deals with a different aspect of teacher development.

Objectives in the second set are designed to "develop the final product, a competent teacher," the document says.

It is then explained in the handout that to meet those objectives the curricula for the teacher education program should include three components: general education, specialization and professional. The document says all of these are "interrelated and are dependent upon each other."

Students wanting to be in the teacher education program at the end of their sophomore year need to have a minimum of a 2.5 grade-point average, an American College Test composite score of at least 800, or a Scholastic Aptitude Test composite score of at least 800. After being recommended by the junior block faculty, they are in the department.

According to Sandrin, the education department is the "most heavily regulated department on campus."

He noted special requirements which included references from instructors in and outside the department, from the Structures of Teaching instructor, and the microteaching instructor. Prospective teacher education students must also have 56 or more semester hours with a minimum 2.5 GPA; a handwritten autobiography; an application approved by their major department and the 10 or higher composite on the ACT.

Sandrin explained there is a "loophole" to the last requirement. He said one could "retake the ACT or take another standardized test" in hopes of getting an acceptable score.

He also mentioned one student who scored a composite of 13 on the ACT and had a 3.71 GPA.

Four steps to the program were outlined. The first was the admission process, then internal application to the program, followed by maintaining at least a 2.5 GPA in specialty courses. Finally, the last semester of the senior year is the professional semester.

"Our programs are heavily evaluated," said Sandrin. He then explained five ways in which they are evaluated.

The National Teachers Examination is given to seniors in the fall or spring semester. Within this test there are three examinations: communications, general knowledge, and a professional test.

These objectives provide an overview of the program and serve as a basis for the long-range plan of teacher education.

Sandrin outlined the long range plans and strategies for the teacher education program.

Sandrin explained these strategies. The strategy for the immediate future will require all secondary education majors to take the NTE (National Teacher's Examination).

"This will provide a measure of competency in the knowledge and skills of the teaching specialty," said Sandrin.

This plan will require $500 to pay for the tests.

A plan "to develop an area of specialization for the secondary

McNary to emphasize education

education and the proposed lottery were the main topics discussed by Republican gubernatorial candidate Gene McNary Saturday at a press conference held at the Billingsly Student Center.

McNary expressed support for the lottery "as long as the proceeds are earmarked for education."

"I'm elected governor, education will be my top priority," McNary said.

The candidate introduced the first of four papers on improving Missouri's educational system, and asked for support of a lottery to fund the program.

"The state is far behind in education," he said. "It is critical that we address educational needs in the state. It will take a comprehensive program, and no quick fix will do the capabilities of Missouri's universities, provide bold changes in school curriculums, and give incentives to promote excellence in teachers and students.

The program will also emphasize computer literacy.

"Our children will have to be literate in computer language as well as the English language," said McNary. "With increased emphasis on high technology and service industries, 'brain power' is the most treasured asset."

McNary said money for his program will come from improved collection of delinquent taxes, untapped economic recovery, and cost-cutting measures, but these sources alone would be insufficient to provide quality education programs and fund other needs. McNary supports the lottery for this reason, and said such a lottery would generate $160 million in net revenues that could be used for education.

"Some say a lottery is merely designed to raise dollars and is a sinful program," he said.

Multi-Cultural Week begins Monday and continues through the entire week at Missouri Southern.

Events scheduled for the week include lectures, slide shows, international food lunches, displays, and demonstrations.

At 11 a.m. Monday, Dr. Ann Marlowe, associate professor of English, will give a slide presentation on England's cultural and literary sites. Her presentation will be in Room 313 of the Billingsly Student Center.

From 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Monday a reception will be held in Room 310 of the BSC. Entertainment will include native costume dancing.

On Tuesday, the cafeteria will serve an oriental luncheon, featuring such as beef teriyaki, chicken chow mein, and egg rolls. At noon a slide show on Puerto Rico will be presented in Room 313 of the BSC by Dr. Carmen Carney, associate professor of foreign languages. Also at noon on Tuesday, Roy Dobson, instructor at the School of Ballet, will demonstrate break dancing in the Lions' Den. At 7:30 p.m. the French film The Big Day will be presented by the Missouri Southern Film Society in the Connor Ballroom of the BSC.

Wednesday will begin with a luncheon featuring an international selection of crepes. Beginning at 10 a.m. in Room 314 of BSC, Margaret Brangman will lecture on women's roles in the Soviet Union. At 11 a.m. in Room 313 of the BSC, Dr. Allen Merriam, associate professor of communications, will present a slide lecture on Afghanistan. Scheduled for 2 p.m. in the Lions' Den is a fashion show of ethnic costumes by Southern's international students.

Thursday's scheduled events include a Germanfest luncheon featuring Bavarian beefsteak, German potato salad, and other German food. At 11 a.m. in the Connor Ballroom, Dr. Esber Shabane, president of International Institute of Technology, Inc., will present a lecture entitled "American Interests in the Middle East." And at 12:15 p.m. in Billingsly 313, Dr. Bob Stoere, professor of education, will give a slide lecture on the Soviet Union and its youth.

Friday's featured speaker will be Dr. Roberto Gonzalez-Echevarria, professor of Spanish and comparative literature at Yale University. His lecture, entitled "A Hundred Years of Solitude: The Novel as Myth and Archive," is to be delivered at 10 a.m. in the Connor Ballroom. After the lecture, Gonzalez-Echevarria will be joined by Missouri Southern faculty for a panel discussion on "The Contemporary Narrative Tradition in Latin America and the United States: Mutual Influences." Joining him on the panel will be Dr. Henry Morgan, assistant professor of English; Dr. Arthur Salzman, assistant professor of English; and Dr. Carney.

During the week, the Spivey Art Center will present the 34th Annual Competitive exhibit; and a special art exhibit by students presented in the Young Artists Studio will be open from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Saturday in the Spivey Art Center.

Dr. Glenn Dolence, dean of students, and a committee are responsible for the arrangements for Multi-Cultural Week.

All lectures and exhibits are open to the public free of charge.

Publications receive awards

The Winged Lion, Missouri Southern's creative arts magazine, and The Chart, the College's student newspaper, were recently notified that they had won awards.

In its evaluation in five categories, the 1983 edition of the Winged Lion received four ratings of nine and one rating of 10 (a Mark of Distinction). It was awarded first class by the Associated Collegiate Press.

The Chart won third place for the second year in a row in the Society of Professional Journalists/Sigma Delta Chi's Region 7 "Mark of Excellence" contest.

Dr. Arthur Saltzman, assistant professor of English, and Nathaniel Cole, associate professor of art, were the magazine's advisors.

Closing remarks of the magazine's evaluation say, "The staff of the Winged Lion are to be congratulated for a high quality literary achievement. The verbal and visual contents are of outstanding merit and would be a credit to any professional magazine. The range of majors represented by the contributors is impressive and shows an amazing awareness of interest. The central staff must have some secrets worth sharing as to how they achieved this range of interests. An excellent job!"

Associated Collegiate Press evaluates the magazine in five categories: concept; graphic design and typography; layout and format; photography and art; and content, writing, and editing.

Saltzman credited part of the edition's success to the range of majors in its contributors.

"You never know who your writers are," Saltzman said. "And by no means are they all English majors."

Good publicity helped the magazine receive numerous art contributions, according to Cole, and allowed the art staff to be more selective.

"I can only speak for art," Cole said, "but this year looks just as exciting as last. We have received even more material this year than last."

The 1984 edition of The Winged Lion will be released early in May, according to Saltzman.

In the "best all-around student newspaper" competition, The Chart finished behind the University of Iowa's Daily Iowan and the University of Kansas' Daily Kansan.

Region 7 is composed of 11 colleges and universities in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, and Iowa.

Debbie Edmonds

Secretary of the Week Edmonds takes leave to start a new career

By Elissa Manning

Debbie Edmonds has left her secretarial position at Missouri Southern for four months to embark on a new career—motherhood.

Edmonds, who is secretary to Elmer Rodgers, head librarian, gave birth to an 8-pound, 6-ounce girl last Thursday. The baby was not named until Friday. According to Edmonds' husband, Rick, an interesting contest took place for naming the baby.

"We had 24 hours to name her, and we made it with 10 minutes to spare," Rick Edmonds said.

The library staff tried to help in naming the baby. A suggestion box with a sign saying "Name Debbie's Baby" was placed on the third floor of the library.

According to Debbie, several interesting names were found among the suggestions that students and faculty had submitted over the past few weeks. Among these were "Bloody Mary Edmonds," "Scooby Doo Edmonds," and "Oops We Gooled Edmonds." However, no suggestions from the box were used.

The couple named their daughter Lauren Kathleen.

While in the hospital, Edmonds received many flowers and presents from the faculty and staff of the college.

"I got a basket full of flowers," Julie (Leon), she said.

The library staff had a party for Edmonds on March 16, the day before her maternity leave began. The baby was due Monday, March 19, and she stayed on the job as long as she could.

"I get four months off," she said, "but I wanted to stretch it out another way."

Edmonds began working in the library over two years ago. Prior to that she was employed by the Economic Security Corporation in Southern through some of the persons she had met through her employment.

Edmonds graduated from Southwest Missouri State University in 1977 with degrees in business and geography.

The new mother will return to her duties at the College July 1.

Program aids students planning law careers

Student responses to The Law Package, a program developed by the Law School Admission Council (LSAC) and the Law School Admission Services (LSAS), indicate early concern about graduate education and careers.

The Law Package is a program designed to give students a better handle on legal education and the range of legal careers available.

Partial purpose of The Law Package is to help students make some decisions about law school before they begin the time-consuming and costly process of actually applying.

Bruce L. Zimmer, vice-president of Law School Admission Services, said, "While more than 111,000 people took the LSAT during the 1982 test year, only 42,034 actually entered law school in the fall of 1982."

"Many of the 70,000 who did not enter law school discovered, after investing time and money in taking the LSAT and applying to law schools, that they did not want to pursue legal education and careers. Students can use The Law Package early in their undergraduate years to help decide if law school is for them."

"A full third of the students who ordered The Law Package are in their freshman or sophomore years," said Zimmer. "We are very impressed with this trend because we believe it is essential that students consider their future careers and education plans while they have the time to explore their interests and develop their skills."

The high percentage of juniors and seniors ordering the package indicates that students are still searching for guidance and information even as they have to make concrete decisions about graduate education.

The Law Package was introduced on campuses last fall through a nationwide poster campaign, ads in college newspapers, and ads in national magazines. The poster campaign is underway again.

"For $10 you can have the law school all wrapped up" is the poster campaign theme.

"We are trying to convey to students that for a very small investment, they can receive a great deal of information about law schools, the admission process, and legal careers," Zimmer said.

The program is available from the Law School Admission Service and includes the following:

You, The Law and Law School, a book that describes legal career options and what is expected in law school; key facts about U.S. and Canadian law schools; a bibliography of prelaw readings; preparation materials for the LSAT, including details about the nature of LSAT questions; and a sample LSAT with an answer key for self-scoring.

The Test is a tryout LSAT students can take and return to LSAC for a confidential analysis of their results.

Information on five law schools students designate on The Law Package data form will also be provided.

The Admission Process: A Guide booklet that describes major factors that law schools consider in reviewing applicants; financial aid information; and additional sources of information relative to legal education and the admission process.

To order The Law Package, check for $10 dollars and your name, college and address to: Law School Admission Services, Box 144, Newtown PA 18940. Students who desire more information before ordering can request "The Law Package Brochure" by writing LSAS at same address.

State Treasurer to seek private counsel

In an attempt to blow up controversy with the state's court-ordered desegregation payments, Mel Carnahan, Missouri state treasurer, announced he is seeking private counsel.

"I'm not disputing Judge Hungate's authority to order the payments, but I'm asking that a clarifying court order with specific amounts to be paid to each transportation provider accompany each request for payment," said Carnahan.

Carnahan said the money the state is paying for the desegregation order is an unappropriated tap on the state's treasury.

Four desegregation checks have yet to be made. The attorney general's office is requesting more specific court orders before these final payments.

In the recent payment, the checks were sent to the Department of Education before Carnahan had been served the court order.

"As state treasurer, I don't like open-ended commitments of the state's financial resources. It is my responsibility to distribute funds appropriated by the legislature in the absence of an appropriation, and the state with the desegregation payments. I make specific withdrawals in the form of a court order from Judge Hungate. In short—if the disperse unappropriated funds, I'm an airtight transaction."

In an address at the Independence Financial Fair Saturday, Carnahan stressed the importance of good management for a better, more positive future for the state.

Missouri Constitution test to be given

Students needing to take the Missouri Constitution test should observe the lecture and test schedule.

The lecture will be held at 3:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 19, in Room 130 of the library.

The test will be given at 2:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 26, in Room 130 of the library.

All out-of-state students planning to graduate in May or July who have not taken U.S. Government or State and in computer science" is proposed to be implemented by the department in the next five years.

Local Government in a Missouri college should see Dr. Ray Mahabadi of the school of arts and sciences, Room 318 of Hearn Hall on or before April 17 to sign up to take the test.

This computer science area will be a 21-hour concentrative area in elementary education student teacher science.

The area of early childhood education was talked about the possible center.

MSSC develops a day care center which will provide an excellent setting for pre-service teachers," he said. "Now they must spend 48 hours in class and a day."

A day care training center "would provide adequate practicum opportunities for these students," the report said.

He said there is a predicted shortage of elementary and special education teachers in the next five years. For the education department to meet this goal, it needs $17,000-19,000 for an additional faculty member.

The area of admissions and retention was also discussed. "We are also getting into regarding 'turn-over' and retention rates in the area schools."

Regarding the introduction of new programs, Sandrin said the department will use "a number of educational programs."

Another plan is the handout of in-state scholarship programs for the additional students. It is planned that these resources would come from the state and the plan would be enacted in five years.

He said there is a plan to have a day center at Southern, and "in the future teachers from the schools can work our faculty on problems that make their jobs difficult."

He would also call for Missouri state faculty to be able to travel to schools and meet with teachers, principals or administrators.

He also said a consortium is being developed for area schools in which micro-computer software could be exchanged and used.

The total projected cost for all the department's long-range plans is $107,000.

Catalog offers free travel service

The thought of spending a summer semester working in France, Germany, the United Kingdom, Greece or New Zealand sounds appealing. The travel planning service is offered by the 1984 Student Travel Catalog published by the Council on International Educational Exchange. The catalog gives detailed information on a world-wide discounts. A free guide outlining savings on air travel to fill per cent, tours, rail travel, insurance, language programs and accommodations is available to students.

It has also negotiated reciprocal agreements in each country where staffs will be available to advise students on job-hunting, orientation-seeking, and provide them with orientation handbooks containing general information on the country. Before leaving, students must obtain an International Student Identification Card. These cards and the Travel Catalog may be obtained from CIEE. The cost for the cards is $8 and the catalog is $1.

Another program sponsored by CIEE is called "Where To Stay USA." This space-available hotel discount plan is for "everyone." Eligibility is not dependent upon age or student enrollment.

The plan offers a selection of more than 1,000 facilities nation-wide, from the simple bed-and-breakfast inn to the most sophisticated high-rise hotel. Those hotels with space available will honor the cardholder with a 25 per cent discount.

Travelers may stop in at any campus travel office or write directly to CIEE to receive the discount card and the accompanying 62-page directory. The cost is $12.

Additional information on these and other programs may be obtained from CIEE, Dept. STC, 205 East Street, New York, NY 10017, (212) 661-1414.

'Super Dance 1984' sets goal at $20,000

"Super Dance 1984," a fund-raising event sponsored by the Muscular Dystrophy Association, will be held from 11 p.m. to midnight on Saturday, April 7, at Sgt. Pepper's in Galena, Kan.

The dance is sponsored by the Joplin and Springfield MDA chapters and Kappa Alpha fraternity members who will donate time in helping with the event.

"We want to raise $20,000," said Arleigh Holmes, Kappa Alpha president. "We are trying to get a lot of people from different colleges and get couples to sign up."

The dance collected over $7,000 last year.

According to Holmes, 78 per cent of the money will go to research. The rest will be used to help MDA patients in the area.

For reasons of accessibility, the dance will not be held in Robert Ellis Young Gymnasium as in prior years.

"We had lower attendance at these dances," said Holmes. "We want to raise the attendance so it will not be the same old thing."

Prizes will be given both to persons in the dance contest and persons finding the most sponsors.

Grand prize is a trip for two to New Orleans for three days and two nights. Second prize is two personal computers. There will be various other prizes, such as dinners for two, bicycles, and television sets.

"Area businesses donated prizes," said Holmes. "We have had quite a bit of pledges in the past. Some people have raised over $1,000 before."

Those interested in entering the contest should pick up their applications at Sgt. Pepper's, Musicland on the Northpark Mall, or from a Kappa Alpha member.

There will be a cover charge of $5 for persons attending the event.

Library receives 23 books on Korean culture, lifestyle

A collection of books relating to Korea was recently donated to Missouri Southern's Spiva Library, according to Elmer Rodgers, head librarian.

The library received a total of 23 books from the Intercultural Society of Korea. Rodgers said Spiva was one of several libraries receiving books from the Society.

"The books cover history, art, theatre, and other areas of Korean culture," Rodgers said. "They have a total value of $525. Some are quite new, and one is valued at $100."

Rodgers said the books were being processed this week, and should be available for checkout soon.

"We are very happy to get them," Rodgers said. "It's an area we don't buy books often, and of course it will increase our holdings."

Among the new books donated are "6,000 Years of Korean Art," by Choi Sumu; "Early Korean Typography," by Sohn Pow-key; "Korean Art," "Korean Painting," "Korean Dance," "Korean Music," "Korean Thought," "Korean Traditions," "Korean Folklore," "Korea and Christianity," "History of the Korean People," and several books in the Korean language.

Senior job interviews to be held

Job interviews for graduating seniors will be held on the Missouri Southern campus in April.

Stacey A. Martin will be interviewing Thursday, April 12, for any students interested in sales and financial planning.

Interviews for sales positions with the Armour-Dial Company will be conducted Tuesday, April 17, by representative Harold Fletcher.

Bill Scott will be conducting interviews for both elementary and secondary teaching positions with the North Kansas City Schools on Wednesday, April 18.

All interviews will be in the placement office, Room 217, Billingsly Student Center. For an interview, call 624-4100, ext. 343, or sign up in the placement office.

To be eligible for interviews, persons must be an alumni, a December 1983 graduate, or a May 1984 graduate, and have credentials on file with the placement office.

Blood drive collects 135 pints

Missouri Southern's blood drive, sponsored by the Student Nurses Association, raised 135 pints of blood from donors last Wednesday in the Billingsly Student Center.

Goal of the drive was 100 pints.

There was a contest between organizations to determine which one could give the most blood. The Campus Activities Board came in first, and the Society of American Dental Hygienists finished second.

"We are really glad for the people who came to donate," said Theresa Esterline, vice-president of the Student Nurses Association. "We appreciate the donations."

and activities of the time."

The equipment is authentic reproductions of Civil War material, purchased by each re-enactor.

According to Anetta St. Clair, assistant professor of political science and day director, "Learning and doing history can be fun and exciting."

In addition to the re-enactment, displays created by area schools were shown Friday in Billingsly Student Center.

Day's activities involved students from 17 area elementary, junior high, and high schools.

The social science faculty did all of the main judging," said St. Clair. "They provided the real backbone of manpower. The social science club and various students from our classes added student power."

Individual and group awards were also given for history performances, media presentations, and historic papers.

"The judges told me that the quality was improving and the research was much superior to last year," St. Clair said.

A college bowl was also conducted with history questions asked to those involved.

Karate class begins Wednesday

A one-week class in Karate and Tae-Kwon-Do will be offered by Southern's School of Continuing Education starting Wednesday.

The course is designed to instruct beginning and advanced students in self-defense, philosophy, and techniques of Karate and Tae-Kwon-Do. It includes advanced forms, movements, and applications of self-defense.

Fee for the course is $23. Classes will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays and 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. on Saturdays. Students should wear sweat suits and jogging shoes.

The class will meet in Room 120 (basement firing range) of the Missouri Southern Police Academy.

Reporter's story is only a rumor

Rumors that Coordinating Board of Higher Education plans could change Missouri Southern into a two-year college have been found to be just that: rumors.

These rumors were propagated by a Springfield News-Leader article that suggested the plan as one being considered by the CBHE.

In a conversation with Steven Dougherty, higher education's deputy commissioner for planning, the rumor surfaced "as but one model" suggested by the News-Leader reporter of what changes may take place under preliminary CBHE plans.

Dougherty said the model suggested by the reporter was representative of the work involved in the Board's Master Plan.

He added in a Joplin Globe article that although the model was representative of the Board's work, it was "totally incorrect as an alternative. It's not realistic because Southwest Missouri is the most rapidly growing area in the state."

It seems the Springfield reporter overlooked this fact.

Shaila Aery, state commissioner of higher education, said the Board would not have approved a four-year computer degree program, and would not be approving a four-year degree in nursing this April for Southern if the rumors were part of CBHE plans.

Again, these are facts the reporter has seemed to overlook.

Information and facts not provided in a news story can sometimes be as injurious, libelous, or damaging as wrong or more factual information. In the case of the News-Leader article, the fact that the Southern situation was offered "as but one model" was not mentioned. Thus, the information presented in the article pertaining to Southern was out of context.

Out of its hypothetical context, "Missouri Southern" could just have accurately have been "University of Missouri—Rolla," "Southeast Missouri State University," or any other college or university in Missouri.

Accuracy is the greatest requisite of any news story. It must also be the most important. A reporter's ramblings may be perfectly readable, coherent, and understandable, but without accuracy, it is not news; only rumor.

Activities provide valuable chance

America has long been called the "melting pot" of the world. This distinction arises out of the vast, diverse nationalities that have made this country their home.

Such diverse cultural influences have an effect on all aspects of our daily lives.

This being true, it is important to become aware of these influences, not because of the differences, but how these differences work together to make this nation unified in its diversity.

The Multi-Cultural Week activities, which are scheduled for April 2-6, provide a valuable opportunity to recognize and gain an appreciation of the different cultural backgrounds that combine to constitute our "American" culture.

President's Message:

Institutional pride is a source of progress

By Dr. Julio Leon, President
Missouri Southern State College

Last summer I had an opportunity to attend a meeting of the ASSCU (American Association of State Colleges and Universities) Task Force on Excellence in Education in Vermont. During the discussions on the topic of what our institutions could do to help public schools strive toward excellence, a university president from New Mexico mentioned and praised MSSC's program of high school competitions on our campus as an excellent way of helping in that regard. Several colleges and universities have contacted us since then to inquire about our program of high school competitions. In the same manner, we are now being asked by other colleges and private businesses about our use of microcomputers for instructional and administrative purposes.

As we battle with our day-to-day problems, we have a tendency to forget the good things we do as an institution. Our own departmental concerns may keep us sometimes from realizing how other departments and areas on campus contribute significantly to the enhancement and fulfillment of our mission.

As I observed History Day on campus last weekend, I realized how well we do many things at MSSC and how we should all be proud to be a part of this college. The exhibit of projects by the junior and senior high school students participating was simply outstanding. Think of what we are doing for those students and their teachers. We not only provide an outlet for them to display their accomplishments, but throughout the year they have the motivation and the incentive of a competition that drives them to do the best they can. The Civil War battle reenactment unfortunately took place in the rain for the second year in a row, but that is all right. Don Seneker would be the first to admit that not all were fought under ideal weather conditions.

History Day is not the only competition held on our campus. The English Business Contest, Music Festival, Tournament, Math and Biology Laboratory Arts Day, Foreign Language ROTC Field Day all do the same thing. They represent an important contribution to excellence in education for the public and for MSSC, and all are driven by a spirit of dedication and hard work.

As we think of our college and as we portray to others what MSSC is all about, let us rise above our parochial concerns and remember that as an institution of education there are many things to be proud of. Let us support, encourage and encourage each other. Institutional pride is one of the most important sources of progress.

In Perspective:

Education prepares students for citizenship

By Bill Putnam, Jr., Regent
Missouri Southern State College

Much has been written about what constitutes the optimum educational experience, and the debate is far from over. With the understanding that one's education is never complete, I'd like to offer the following thoughts relative to our "college days."

As the title implies, I believe that the purpose of education is to prepare us for responsible citizenship. Responsible citizenship is more than just holding a job and/or raising a family—although these are important ingredients. How we do this, and the service we render to society in the process, should be a prime concern of education.

I certainly would not question the traditional emphasis on "studies" and good grades, but I honestly feel that extra-curricular activities associated with a college like Missouri Southern are equally important. We will be more effective citizens in our "working-life" communities if we bring with us the experience of the extra-curricular activities available in our college community. Service is part of the rent we pay for the privilege of belonging to the many "communities" we will be associated with in our lifetime on this planet.

In addition to specialized knowledge in your chosen field, I believe that computer skills and communications skills are critical prerequisites for success in life beyond college.

While specialized knowledge and computer skills may be best learned in the classroom, perhaps communications skills can be best learned in the laboratory of human experience. Athletics, the Greek system and other activities, student government, and organizations are fertile areas for communications skills.

In this election year, we can help ourselves for responsible citizenship in political area by participating fully in the government of our college community, the Student Senate.

Don't neglect your class work. Be shortchange the investment you are making in your education by failure to be of service to your college community. Participating in total educational experiences available at Missouri Southern will be invaluable preparation for responsible citizenship.

Letters to the Editor

'Ignorance of God is no excuse anymore'

A little religion is a dangerous thing. Our malcontent behavior in protesting a religious exercise termed voluntary prayer in schools is rather infantile when we consider that God in Heaven draws nigh to those who draw nigh unto Him.

Your March 8, 1984, editorial "Prayer in schools" was a significant reflection of a prevalent attitude among our society, i.e., "Religion is a personal matter and should be taught at home and in church; not in public schools." Talk about hypocrisy—your words are telling us you!

The fact of the matter is religion is not taught in the majority of the homes of America—Mom and Dad (if they are still living together) just somehow don't have time for Bible reading in their children or even praying with their children. Think about it.

And let's talk about teaching religion in church. Statistics indicate that only a small percentage of Americans regularly attend a church. It seems as no surprise to learn that less than 10 per cent of the Joplin population attends church. Who are we trying to fool? This would certainly leave little opportunity for teaching religion.

We haphazardly cry out—"The world is getting worse" and "Crime is increasing" and we even turn our high moral minds to studying the tragic episode of a woman getting raped on top of a hotel room pool table—quickly judging who is at fault. And all the time our children are being raped spiritually because opportunities of teaching about God are being dismissed by us "high minded, educated" adults who think we know best about morality.

The truth is—we don't know best for our children—but God does, and He plainly tells us to "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." (Proverbs 22:6). Yes, a little religion is a dangerous thing.

It's high time we woke up to the fact that ignorance of God is no excuse anymore. It is really sad to realize that so many people don't know God—but He knows all about them. If we choose to be ignorant, so be it—but let's give the children an opportunity IN SCHOOL to make their own decision about God, because they may not have that opportunity anywhere else.

Flea Markets

One of the largest flea markets in the area is the Joplin Flea Market at 12th and Virginia. This market has individual booths and a buyer can find items from books to jewelry to tools. Some items are antiques and many are collectibles from all areas of today's world.

Story by Kathleen Stokes
Photos by Barb Fullerton

Webster's New World Dictionary defines flea market as an "outdoor bazaar dealing mainly in cheap, second-hand goods." That may be true for many, but in Joplin a new definition is being given to flea markets—an indoor bazaar dealing in brand new goods, wonderful old antiques, and anything reusable.

Joplin has five indoor flea markets. The Bizarre Bazaar—Antiques and Collectibles is located at 1040 Joplin. It's open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday through Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday is the Joplin Flea Market at 12th and Virginia.

The Ozark Flea Market is managed by Harold and Elaine Dilworth. It is located at 3046 East 7th and is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday.

Elaine Dilworth explained that booths are rented to dealers between $11.50 and $15 a week. The dealer furnishes his own stock, which may include practically anything. The dealers also sell their own prices.

The merchandise at the Ozark Flea Market includes paintings, toys, silverware, dishes, books, clothes, clocks, and much more—some brand new.

"We get people from every state—everyone, including plain old working people like me," said Dilworth.

Dilworth believes setting up in a flea market is probably a full-time job for many of the dealers, several of whom have their own shops.

The flow of customers is not always predictable.

"Sometimes we have a fantastic week or a real poor week. It doesn't have a pattern," said Dilworth.

Another indoor flea market is the Kentucky Street Flea Market. It is located at 315 Commercial Alley and is managed by James Turner.

The market is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday through Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Turner said the Market, which has been in business three years, specializes in antiques and collectibles.

Turner said he buys most of his own merchandise at auctions, yard sales, and garage sales. However, some stock is brought in by dealers who pay $10 a week for one of the 31 booths in use now.

Most of the persons who buy items at the Market are dealers and collectors, according to Turner.

On the first floor of the Market can be found all railroad lamps, toys, tools, radios, ice boxes, stoves, pictures, and signs. On the second floor is furniture, sewing machines, trunks, and school desks.

Turner said there was little profit in the antique business.

"If I make a 25 per cent profit, it's pretty good," he said.

Turner is more secure for James Martin's Flea Market at 1201 Main Street. It specializes mainly in reusable items and knick-knacks.

Operated by Mike and Erma Hoag, the Market is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Thursday through Sunday. It has been in business for nearly two years.

The merchandise at the Market comes from business and local citizens. No booths are set up. Dealers usually buy the items and individuals buy the useful, reusable items.

Hoag said persons usually just come in to look on Saturdays with Saturday and Sunday being the busiest days.

Hoag explained that the Market began as a hobby with everyone in the family collecting different things. From there it slowly developed into a profitable business.

He said he would like to start his business toward antiques, but he does not believe there is enough profit in that area today as compared to the sale of more practical items that are actually used.

Exhibition offers variety of media

Spiva Art Center's 34th Annual Competitive is scheduled to open at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Spiva Art Center, and run through Sunday, April 29.

In this exhibition, which has formerly been called the Annual May Competitive, there were 354 works submitted by 125 artists, out of which 86 pieces by 88 artists were accepted for display.

"The purpose of this exhibition is to showcase through selection of the juror art work in a variety of the media by artists currently working in Missouri and the eight bordering states," said Val Christensen, director of the Spiva Art Center.

Works entered in the exhibition are paintings, sculptures, graphics, and ceramics which have been executed by the individual artists in the past two years, and have never been exhibited in the Spiva Art Center.

Local artists whose work will be displayed are Nancy Sulzner, a former Missouri Southern student and now a high school art teacher, and Keith Anderson, a student at Washington University in St. Louis. Both are of Diamond, Mo.

David Clow, formerly of Joplin and now a resident of Kansas City, and Jerry Ellis, a watercolorist from Carthage, will also be represented in this exhibition.

Joplin artists who will be represented are June Dixon; Sara Jean Perkins; Jack Davis, a former student of Southern; and Judy Noble-Fowler, part-time art instructor at Southern. Juror Dr. Robert Nelson, Missouri State University, is presenting $1,000 in cash awards to the five top artists around 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the Spiva Art Center. The artist whose work is chosen as Best Show will receive $450, the runner-up will receive $225, and the three top place winners will receive $100 each. There will be others receiving honorable mention.

"Being held in conjunction with the Spiva Annual Competitive is an exhibition of Monoprints at Artworks 123 Main, Joplin, which will feature work of Nelson's work," said Christensen. "He is an educator, printer, painter, and drawer."

Each artist whose work has been accepted for the Spiva Annual will receive a catalog featuring this year's accepted art works. Additional copies may be purchased for $1 each.

Hours for the Art Center are 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

There is no admission charge.

Non-traditional students to teach

Among the many students entering the student teaching field this summer are non-traditional students Jeanne Nodler, Florence Orcutt, and Kay Coiner. They are all art majors.

Each has her own reasons for waiting to get a college degree.

"It took me longer to set my goals, and to decide what I wanted to do," said Nodler. "Also, my son was at an age that I could take time away from him, so my husband began to encourage me to come back to school and take my classes because he knew I enjoyed art."

Orcutt said, "When I came back to school it was for my own pleasure."

Orcutt has always enjoyed the area, and likes to teach.

"Before I came to college I was a dancing teacher," she said. "When I came to college I decided to take art because I have always enjoyed doing it. After taking the art classes I decided I wanted to be a teacher. My family is grown, so I had time to devote to it."

Coiner said, "When I first started college I took night classes at Crowder College."

My art teacher encouraged me to go full time. My husband began encouraging me, too. I graduated from Crowder before coming here."

Although Coiner did not become seriously involved in art until attending Crowder, it has been important to her for most of her life.

"Ever since I was a very small child I liked to draw," she said. "Then when I went to high school, the school I was attending didn't offer art classes, so I let my art go. Then, when I came to college, I started taking ceramics classes. And then I started taking other art classes. I enjoyed them very much. I like to teach, too, so I decided to combine the two."

All three believe that being a mother will definitely help in being able to communicate with the children in the classroom.

Coiner said, "I admire the young students who are going out to teach and have not had much experience in dealing with children."

They also believe that "what is taught in the education and psychology classes can be applied at home as well as in the classroom."

Each of the women is looking forward to the opportunity to teach what they have learned. But, they are none-the-less excited about the knowledge they will receive from teaching and the challenges they will face.

"I believe we will gain as much knowledge as we will offer," said Orcutt. "I believe the children will learn, but I believe we will continue to learn, also."

Ideas of being challenged can be exciting to the beginning art teacher. These challenges can come in various forms. One of these forms can be in the shape of resourcefulness.

"I believe one of the major problems we will encounter will be funding for the art classes," said Coiner. "With there being a shortage of funds, our activities will be challenged. We may have to use articles being discarded to make worthwhile projects. It will probably keep us busy trying to come up with new ideas to try."

"After being in school for several years it will be a real challenge in making the transition from the role of student to the role of teacher," said Nodler. "I am excited because I have several ideas I want to get out and try. From clinical observation I found that being in the classroom was addictive and makes you want to get back to teaching."

Nodler will be student teaching at Parkwood High School as well as five elementary schools. Orcutt will be student teaching at St. Mary's Grade School and St. Peter's Junior High. Coiner will be doing her student teaching in Diamond.

Area schools to compete tomorrow

Area high school students will compete with another tomorrow and Saturday in the District Music Festival at Missouri Southern.

Instrumentalists will compete from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. tomorrow, followed by the vocalists at the same time Saturday.

Serving as the instrumental judges will be 13 adjudicators from various high schools, colleges, and universities while 10 will judge the vocalists.

Competitions will be held in Pappas Recital Hall, Robert Ellis Young Gymnasium, Taylor Auditorium, and Hearnes Hall.

CAB tickets still available

There are still a few tickets available for the Campus Activities Board's Thursday, April 5, trip to Kansas City to watch the Royals play the New York Yankees. Tickets may be purchased for $8 in the student activities office in Room 101 of the Billingsly Student Center.

An art exhibit by students in the Spiva Art Center children's classes will be on display from 10 a.m. to 12 a.m. Saturday in the Spiva Art Center.

Brietzke organizing new Shakespeare Company

"To be or not to be?"

"Hamlet, Romeo, where for thou comest?"

These and other Shakespearean quotes will soon be uttered by participants in a new Shakespeare Company group being organized by Trij Brietzke, part-time instructor in the theatre department at Missouri Southern.

The group, which Brietzke termed "a non-academic seminar," is for those who have an interest in Shakespeare and his works.

"We will have some experience in reading Shakespeare," Brietzke said. "We would like to invite anyone who is interested to join with us. We are looking towards a main stage production next fall."

Brietzke emphasized the informality of the group, explaining that it was easier to learn Shakespeare in a relaxed atmosphere.

"We are trying to be as casual and informative as we can," she said. "Our main purpose is to give students, student actors, faculty, staff, and anyone who is interested the opportunity to work with Shakespeare. Even people who have never had any experience can work in a casual atmosphere. Part of it is to shake our fears. It will also be a place we can share information with others in the group."

The group is being organized by Brietzke and members of the Alpha Phi honor fraternity. Though many theatre majors will be involved, Brietzke said the group is open to everyone on campus.

"The idea grew out of a desire of ing a production on stage," she said.

The next meeting for the group will be at 3:30 p.m. Monday, April 16, in the green room of the Billingsly Student Center. The group will begin reading the play A Midsummer Night's Dream.

"We hope this will encourage people to take Shakespeare classes," Brietzke said. "Our main emphasis will be giving actors the opportunity to work with Shakespeare in an unstressful situation."

Deadline set for program

Persons under 21 years of age interested in spending a summer working on non-credit humanities research projects are encouraged to apply through the National Endowment for the Humanities grant program.

The Younger Scholars Program will award up to 100 grants nationally for outstanding research and writing projects in fields of history, philosophy and study of literature. These projects will be carried out during the summer of 1985. The application deadline is Sept. 15, 1984.

Award recipients will be expected to work full-time for nine weeks during the summer, researching and writing a humanities paper under the close supervision of a humanities scholar. This is not a financial aid program and no academic credit should be sought for the projects.

For guidelines, write to: Younger Scholars Guidelines CN, Room 426, the National Endowment for the Humanities, Washington, D.C. 20540.

Jacques Tati stars in the French comedy film, The Big Day. Tati plays a postman in a small village who is mocked for his different means of delivering the mail. The film is presented by the Missouri Southern Film Society.

'The Big Day'

Film Society, Arts Council to feature French comedy

The Big Day, a French comedy will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Connor Ballroom of the Billingsly Student Center at Missouri Southern.

This is the 11th program in the current Film Festival presented by the Missouri Southern Film Society and co-sponsored by the Missouri Arts Council.

The Big Day, also known as Jour De Fete, is a delightful comedy featuring the master of the sight gag, Jacques Tati. He plays a postman in a small French village who is mocked for his archaic means of delivering the mails. At a fair, he sees a film about efficiency in the American postal system and tries to out do it. The result is a hilarious mixture of slapstick and satire on the modern means for speed.

The merits of the film are best revealed in comments by Roy Armes in his book, French Cinema: "Jacques Tati was a mime before becoming film-maker and his film recalls the essential of all serious comedy: the art of timing his gags...It heralded the school of comedy and four years passed before another film of Tati's appeared but Jour De Fete was sufficient mark out its director and star as one of the original talents in the history of the French Cinema."

Single admission at the door is $1.00 for adults and $1.00 for senior citizens and adults.

David Turner

Custodian was once a lawyer:

Turner enjoys his work

By Jean Campbell

Why would a man educated and experienced in law and physical therapy choose to work as a custodian at Missouri Southern?

"Believe it or not, I have always wanted to be a custodian," said David Turner, custodian in the technology building. "One thing we have to sell is cleanliness and health care. The work is challenging, and yet at the same time it is in a relaxed atmosphere."

Turner is a graduate of the United States Naval Law School at the University of Southern California. In addition, he studied physical education through the Brooks Agency in Hollywood and earned a degree in physical therapy from the Simmons Institute.

Turner, a native Missourian, was born in St. Louis and reared and educated in Poplar Bluff. In 1945 he graduated from high school and joined the Navy where he studied law.

"I traveled the entire Pacific coast area as a recorder prosecuting various court martial cases," said Turner.

During Turner's Navy career, in 1949, he married a girl he had met in high school. They had two children—a boy and a girl.

His wife was killed in 1959 in a United Air Lines plane crash just outside of Denver. Left with two small children, ages 8 and 10, Turner recalls, "It was a problem at times, but I had a sister and she was there when we needed her."

Turner decided not to practice law after his military retirement. "It was too negative," he said. "It was most depressing. Many times I felt on the side of the defendant instead of the government. We don't really realize how defenseless we are until we come up against the establishment."

Turner's military retirement took him to Eagle Rock, Calif., near Los Angeles, where he met Ben Nye, who was in charge of make-up and fashion for 20th Century Fox.

"He (Nye) introduced me to the health field," said Turner.

After studying physical education, Turner worked for the Brooks Agency setting up and operating agencies across southern California until 1969.

During this time, Turner met Harold Koplar of the Koplar Hotel Chain. Koplar owned the Chase Park Plaza Hotel in St. Louis and the Lodge of the Four Seasons at the Lake of the Ozarks.

"I went to the Lodge of the Four Seasons to build the 'Spa of the Turtle,'" said Turner, who said that the spa put a big emphasis on weight loss and physical fitness programs, including stress management.

"The problem today is that many executives are burning themselves out," said Turner. "I went to Four Seasons to develop a program that was both physically and mentally rejuvenating."

"The biggest challenge and achievement I have ever undertaken was the building and development of the 'Spa of the Turtle,'" said Turner. "This was all positive. You were helping to build positive mental and physical attitudes."

While Turner was affiliated with the 'Spa of the Turtle,' he authored articles that were featured in some nationally circulated publications, such as Teen, Seventeen, Golden Future, and the St. Louis Dispatch.

Turner came to Joplin in 1974. Following work in sales for B.W. Johnson Manufacturing, Turner opened the first Manpower Office in Joplin and managed it for three years.

"Manpower is the largest temporary help service in the world," said Turner. "I had a staff of four and dealt with as many as 800 clients a day placing people on work assignments. We supplied temporary help for every kind of job."

Upon learning of a custodial position opening at Southern in 1978, Turner applied and was hired.

"I would like to have been a minister," said Turner, a member of the Oak Grove Baptist Church. "I feel I possibly could have served my fellowman in a greater degree as a minister of the gospel."

Turner lists music, fishing, and watching football games as hobbies.

"I came to the college games. I even wore my green pants and yellow shirt," he said.

His love for music is shared by his daughter, Leanna, who besides teaching elementary music in Germany has spent two years with the La Scala Opera Company and one year with the Vienna Opera as a vocalist.

His son, David, is a "trouble shooter" for a steel processing firm in Los Angeles. He is a graduate of Texas A&M.

"Mind power is excellent at Southern," Turner said. "They have some tremendous teachers here. I sometimes wonder if the students aren't changing themselves. I think there is a tendency in all of us at times to be a little bit lazy. We build a ladder with which we climb. Missouri Southern can be an excellent step on that ladder for the students."

"My goals are day-to-day," he continued. "I try to get the most out of my time and let everyday be an achievement."

Army ROTC unit to perform May 6

Missouri Southern's Army ROTC unit has been invited to perform the color guard and flag-carrying ceremonies at the dedication of the President Truman Monument on May 6 in Lamar.

The color guard is a component of the advanced military science course. The participants are colored ROTC cadets who have volunteered for duty. Presently there are seven members.

The department is civic minded and has demonstrated the support in official capacity to bring honor to the ROTC, the corps, the college, and the national colors," said Turner. "We've demonstrated the willingness and ability—it's only natural for us to be involved."

The dedication ceremonies, a project of the American Legion, will be held at the birthplace of President Truman in Lamar. The American Legion has extended an invitation to President Ronald Reagan to present the official dedication. According to Durst, Kenneth Tucker, chairman of the Truman Monument Committee of the American Legion District 15, Kansas Southern's ROTC unit is a significant military presence to the ceremony.

Field Day is Saturday

Senior ROTC Field Day will be held on campus on Saturday.

The military science department at Southern will host the event for high school Junior ROTC units from Parkwood, Memorial, Neosho, Ada, and Webb City.

The day's events will begin at 10 a.m. with a flag-raising ceremony in Hughes Stadium. The units will participate in a series of competitions including marksmanship, first aid, drill and marching, and physical fitness.

Energy authority to speak here Thursday

Dr. Esber I. Shaheen, president of the International Institute of Technology, Inc. (IITI), will be one of the speakers during Multi-Cultural Week at Missouri Southern.

Shaheen, the father of Southern student Jamal Shaheen, came to the United States from Lebanon when he was 20 years old. He received his bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from Oklahoma State University in 1961, his master's degree from the University of Arizona, and his Ph.D. from the University of Tennessee.

He began his long affiliation with the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago in 1968-1970 and again in 1974-1980.

Shaheen helped to establish courses and was an instructor at the University of Petroleum and Minerals in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia in 1970-1972.

In 1974 and 1975 Shaheen set up a gas engineering program for the Algerian Petroleum Institute. He also acted as senior engineer and manager of education projects at the Institute.

Shaheen has wide experience as a college instructor and as a consultant in oil-producing nations. The universities he has taught at include the University of Tennessee—Chattanooga, Petroleum and Minerals in Saudi Arabia, and Wisconsin—Milwaukee. He has also taught at the Illinois Institute of Technology, the Institute of Gas Technology, and the Algerian Petroleum Institute.

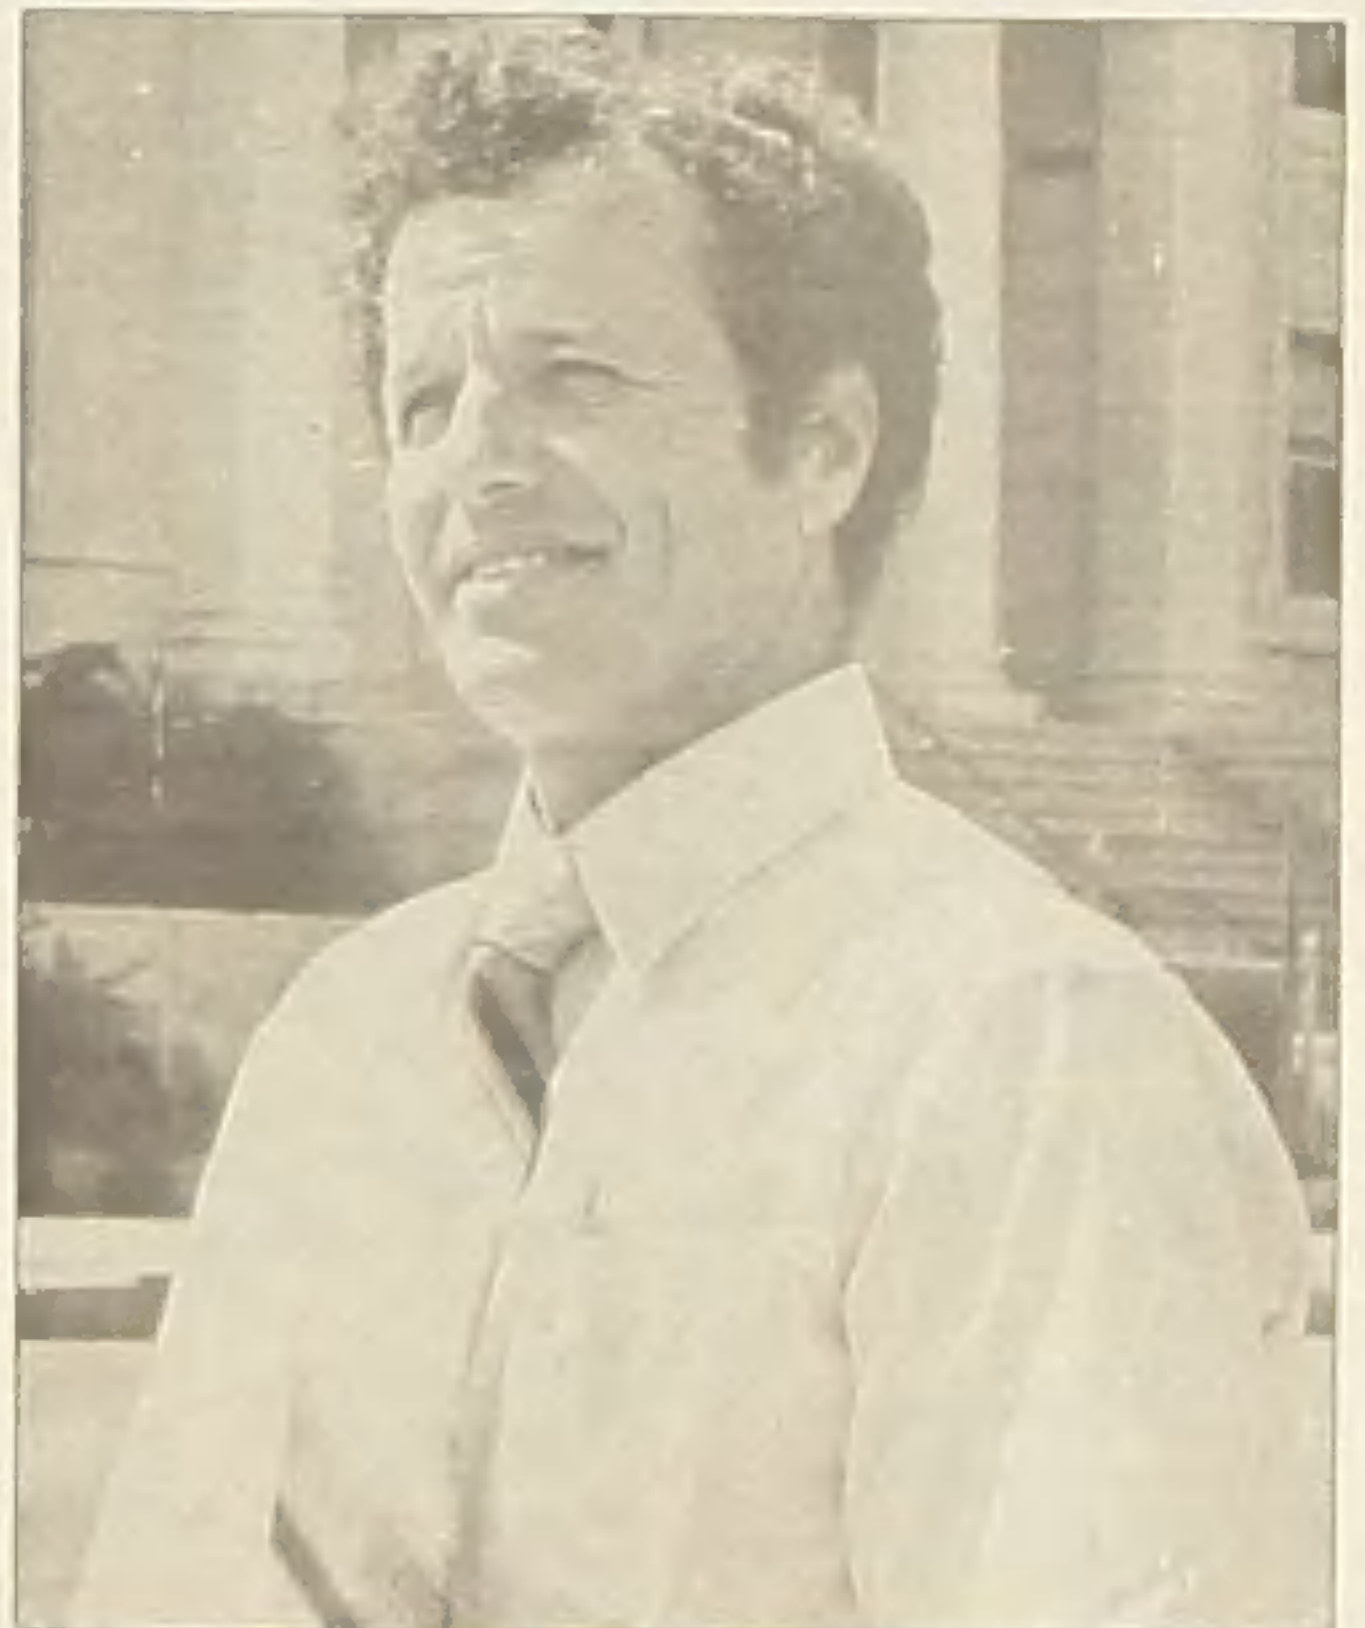

Shaheen was the director of educational services for the Institute of Gas Technology and also the director of international education programs for the Gas Development Corporation.

As a widely recognized and published authority on energy, Shaheen has authored five textbooks in the field of energy and environment and more than 60 articles and presentations. He is the author, co-author, or editor of nearly 20 training manuals in the fields of gas engineering and technology. He was the editor of the 1980 International Petroleum Encyclopedia.

In 1980, Shaheen founded the International Institute of Technology, Inc., in the Joplin public library.

The IITI is a gas, petroleum, and chemical engineering training institute.

Shaheen will be lecturing at Southern in conjunction with Multi-Cultural Week. He will be speaking about American interests in the Middle East at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Connor Ballroom of the Bollinger Student Center.

Dr. Esber I. Shaheen

Patron scholarships available

Students wishing to apply for patron scholarships are urged to fill out applications at the financial aids office by May 1.

According to James Gilbert, director of financial aids, there are plenty of scholarships available.

At now, there are almost fewer patrons than scholarships available," Gilbert said.

All applicants will be screened, and scholarship recipients chosen from those submitted.

"We had many more applicants this time last year," Gilbert said. "I don't know why students have not been filling them out."

The financial aids office is located on the bottom floor of Hearnes Hall.

Lady Lions to play in tourney

After suffering two rainouts this week, Missouri Southern's softball team is looking forward to this weekend's tournament at Emporia State University.

"We are playing in a 10-team tournament this weekend," Coach Pat Lipira explained. "The teams are divided into two pools of five. We have four games guaranteed—if it doesn't rain.

The Lady Lions will play Washburn University at 10:30 a.m.; Missouri Western at noon; and Oklahoma Baptist at 4:30 p.m. on Friday.

On Saturday they will take on Morrisville (Iowa) College at 1:30 p.m. Depending on a first or second-place finish in their pool, they may play additional games Saturday and Sunday.

The softball team managed to win two of three games in the Pittsburg State University Tournament last Friday and Saturday. They defeated Augsburg, Minn., 9-6, and Texas Wesleyan 4-2 before falling to the University of Northern Iowa, 9-2.

A later game, scheduled with the University of Nebraska—Omaha, was rained out.

'Rain, rain go away' becomes Lions' song

Finding Head Baseball Coach Warren Turner these days is not too difficult. He has spent the largest part of the past week at Joe Becker Stadium.

In what is fast becoming a rain-plagued season, the Lions snuck in the first half of a double-header Tuesday afternoon against Eastern Illinois University which ended in a 7-7 tie.

Playing the majority of the game in a steady drizzle, the Lions came back in the bottom of the fourth inning to score three runs and even the score at seven.

Coach Turner's Lions have had to cancel 19 games so far this season with no apparent end to the rain on the horizon.

Playing right at .500 ball, the Lions' record stands at 9-9-1.

"This is why we scheduled 56 games in a season—we know we will lose some to the weather," said Turner. "But, considering everything, our season is progressing well and of the nine games we have lost, six were to Lubbock Christian, the World Series winner last year. So all things considered, we're in good shape."

The Lions will have a full slate of games this weekend, meeting Winona, Minn., in an 11 a.m. contest Saturday and five games with the College of St.

Francis—a double header—Friday afternoon at 2 p.m. and Saturday p.m. and then winding up a double header Sunday afternoon.

The Lions are building toward a tournament on May 17-19, hosted by Southern. In the past years, the Lions have placed second four times and look to this year's tournament with hopes of "taking it all."

Pitchers for tomorrow's games are Dale Oker in game one and Dale Stockam in game two.

Saturday's game will match O. Kester against Winona, and Mike Gildehaus against College of St. Francis.

Coach Turner said he's proud of the play from the freshmen players. "It's tough for a freshman to come out and play well, but we've got three that are playing excellent ball—Joe Miller, who's batting .333, Rick Berg at shortstop, and Stockam at pitcher, who is 2-0 so far this season," said Turner.

"We just need to get out and win some games. We've got a good team and we hope to reach our peak right at tournament time," said Turner. "It's tough to get the players ready for a game and then have it canceled. We're ready to play and can play the best."

Softball tournament to be held

Spring weather is the beginning of sunshine and sports.

Missouri Southern's physical education department is sponsoring a coed softball tournament beginning Monday, April 9.

This will be a single elimination tournament with a consolation bracket.

There will be an eight-team limit with at least 10 players—five males and five females—on each team.

Games will be played Mondays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays at 3:15 p.m. and 4:15 p.m. from April 19 by the college soccer teams. Teams should report at least 15 minutes before scheduled game time.

Tournament bracket and play times will be posted in front of physical education office by Wednesday afternoon, April 4.

Persons interested in playing intramural softball should sign up in Room 212 in the physical education department. The deadline is Tuesday, April 3.
